

The inscription reads: "Leader in Construction Employee Safety". On November 20th, the Indiana Construction Association recognized Midwest Mole as one of seven ICA member companies to receive the 2008 Gold Summit Award for excellence in employee safety. This is a special award for us as it was an opportunity for our safety program, and how our employees and supervisors view our program to be compared with other companies of similar size that perform our type of work.

The ICA Safety Awards Program recognizes ICA member general contractors, prime contractors, construction managers and subcontractors for their commitment to excellence in employee and jobsite safety.

A review team from ICA visited our worksite site in Cincinnati conducting a safety inspection and interviewing the workers and supervisors. Gary Star was foreman at the site and the inspectors were challenged to find any discrepancies at a worksite that involved many complex hazards to overcome. All Midwest Mole employees: Field, Maintenance and Office, should be proud of our achievement and my personal thanks to all for making this possible. For without everyone's commitment to safety our success could not be possible.
